COLD WEATHER IN CANADA.

Patrick O'Donnell, the murderer of hanged in Newgate prison, London, at two minutes past eight o'clock this morning.

Despite the boisterous and squawly weather, a considerable crowd assombled at the prison. At 7 o'clock this morning hundreds of workmen were seen passing by the jail, waiting to gaze at the black flag. Among them was O Donnell's brother, who paced to and fro, opposite the flagstaff, in the most dejected manner, exciting the sympathy of all present. Ex Senator Charge, of Colorado, The execution occurred without a smooted as having said that he little O'Donnell was calm and collocted, and made no statement on tho seatfuld.

High Musses were said at 8 o'clock in the various Untholic churches for the repose of O'Donnell's soul. At unite the party and got the soldier the farowell visit of O'Donnell's brother to him on Saturday, O'Don nell gave final instructions in regard to certain private matters. O'Donnell said he felt comforted, because the fund superribed to his defense will be divided among his wife and other dependent relations; he died for Iroland, and would die like a brayeman. O'Donnell's brother was dearons of burying his body in consecrated ground, and was horrified to learn that his remains must be interred in the prison yard. As his brother was not allowed to revisit O'Donnell, he stated that he would General Hancock, whom asked by | stand outside of Nowgate Prison un-

Washington, Dec 15, - There is a disposition on the part of the Democrats to oppose the reorganization of the Senate. Some Republican Senators expect to see two or three days consumed in a useless debate on the subject, a waste of time which will accomplish no results, and only tend to defer the consideration of the report of the committee on rules. The discussion of the rules, some Senators seem to think, will occupy the attention of the Senate for six of the House, though quite a young Frank James, the Out- weeks, and possibly two months. It is probable, therefore, that no important legislation will be accomplished before the second or third week in January.

Under the resolution offered by Mr. Edmunds in the Senate Thursday the election of a president protem, would come up in the ordinary the informer, James Carey, was course of business on Monday. It seems cortain, however, that it will be allowed to lie on the table, and that the Senate will not elect its presiding officer until after the holiday recess, and then only if the state of Senator Anthony's health should permit him to assume the duties of the office. Republicans and Democrats slike are united in their desire to honor Mr. Authony by their votes, but there also provails a feeling that it is their duty to avoid the danger which would arise if by an unlookedfor combination of circumstances the question of presidential succession should become a matter of dispute

If many cups of ten have the reverse of a beneficial effect on the system, on account of the reaction and sense of exbaustion which they invariably produce. vot the first cup of ten offered is as invigorating as it is welcome, and the tea is as closely associated with English and American women in the minds of Frenchmen as is coffee with the French in the minds of Americans. As to the accompaniments of ten-cream and sugar—a recent writer boldly asks. Why don't we forswear them both? as at this hour of the day they interfere far more with the digestive organs than does the ten itself; he considers it would always be as rational to add croam and sugar to wine as to delicately flavored tea. This is rather going shoad, writer, and if we are inclined to sacrifice our sugar we have not yet made up our minds to give up our cream; indeed, gentlemen who drink tea are very free with the cream, both when help ing ladies and when helping thomselves Sugaris decidedly going out of fashion at afternoon ten, and out of ten labes, perhaps, only three will say yes when i is offered; but it may be this is rather the result of fashion than fancy. The French, on the contrary, take sugar lavishly; they even dispense with Americans consider so indispensable at the tea-table, and help thomselves to sugar with their fingers. We draw upon the Russians for many of our customs connected with the dinner table, but have not yet taken kindly to their idea of tea drinking; that is to say, substituting lomon for sugar and eream-"fragrant peel and a hint of acid," a slice of lemon no thicker nor larger than half a crown. This, ac cording to authority already quoted, neither disgnises nor flattens the aroma of good ten, as do the conventional additions, sugar and cream, but combine with and heightens it." The great fault of using lemon consist in adding it in excess, whereas a very slight shaving containing both peol and pulp is the correct quantity for an ordinary cup of tea. But this custom has yet to take root, and with us this process is but a slow one; we are not too ready to take up a new idea, but once we have done so, it is remarkable with what pertinacity we cling to it. When lemon is substituted for cream and sugar, slices of the prescribed size are handed with the tea. Any one who has once tasted the Russia caravan ten will understand the term good tea, but this is a luxury which only the wealthy care to invost in, as it costs up ward of $10 per pound. There is, there is a wide margin from which choose, and economy in this direction is soon detected. It is the province of the master of the house to buy the tea and the one is far oftoner celebrated for the wine he gives his guests than is the other for the choice ten offered to hers. Need of a Better Education.

[Demorest's Monthly.] Nearly every one who testified before the senate commission which sat in New York recently, as to the best means of benefiting the laboring classes agrees that vital changes must be made in our common school education. Boy and girls must be trained to work a well as to read, write and oppher. France, Germany, and ospecially Switzerland, are for ahead of the United States in technical and ar education. Hence the immerse su-periority of the foreign workmen in all our shops and manufactories over the antivo employes.

The American is naturally the most intelligent, quick-witted, and inventive, but he is left hopelessly in the rour when in composition with the trained European artisan. We must rid oursolves of the superstition that our common school system is perfection. As a matter of fact, it is wofully deficient as compared with the industrial education given by continental European nations to their working classes. Apart from our scientific schools, the Cooper Union, and the Boston Technological institute, no provision has been in the United States to do work that requires intelligence and artistic skill.

CAST ADRIET. An Cirphan Girl, Scantily Clad, Thrust

A young German girl, named Lizzie

Prael, aged 16 years, scantily clad and blue with cold, knocked at the door and was quickly admitted at the residence of W. H. Addis, No. 463 South Water street, on Saturday morning, which was a raw, cold day. The girl told a pitiful story of abuse and trouble. She gave her name as Lizzie Prael, and stated that Frank Hackett was her step father. He lives in the fifth ward. He married her mother and she died. Hackett married again, and then her troubles began. She says she refused to go to the milroad and steal coal from the cars, and for refusing to do this, she alleges that Hackett drove her out of doors and cast her adrift. This is the same girl who was beaten some time ago by Hackett, and he was arrested and sists that he is innocent and knows noth fined for his brutality. He couldn't pay ing at all of the occurrence. The grand the fine, and had to work it out on the jury will spare no pains to learn all the chain gang. Before reaching the Addis facts in the case. Such an outrage calls residence the girl says, she visited St. for a thorough sifting and the severes Mary's hospital, but couldn't find a welpunishment that can be administered. come there because the building was full of sick people. She was told by the Sis ters to go on until she found some large house and she would find help. When she reached the Addis residence, she had on a thin calico dress, but no underclothing at all. She were a pair of shoes many sizes too large for her and a pair of men's socks. She says she had been driven from home minus foot-gear, and that the shees and socks had been given to her by a family in the eastern part of the city. Sunday Overscor Nowell and Marshal Meson visited the girl, and to them sho related her story about as given above. The Marshal well remembers the assault made on the girl by Hackett, and he will investigate the matter to-day, and see that just punishment is visited upon the parties who were so hartless as to drive the orphan girl from her home. The girl is not at all weak or sickly, but is stout and able to pay her own way in any kitchen. Until the Overseer or Marshal finds her a place in some family, Mr. Addis will give her necessary com forts and see that she is comfortably clad. IT DID HIM GOOD.

That Bloody Incident in the Fifth Ward The Old Man Found.

The Republican Saturday told of the queer conduct of the Pole, Thomas Mark-ofski, at his home in the lifth ward, that morning. While his wife was temporarily absent, he got a knife and cut open a festering wound on his body received on Dec. 2d, and the blood flowing freely, he disappeared, believing, no doubt, that he would die. During Saturday Officer Acker and Amos Imboden, Wabiish dotectives, kept up a search for the old man by order of Mayor Chambers and Marshal Mason; but not until about six o'clock in the evening did they hear tidings of the missing man, who had once before absented himself mysteriously. The searchers learned that the Pole had wandered about all day and had finally called at a house on Marietta street. He was pale and weak from loss of blood. The offiand weak from loss of blood. The offi-cers brought him up town and placed him in the county jail. He was given proper attention by Dr. Randall. He will probably be taken to the poor farm. It is suggested that the door of his room be locked so that he will not have another chance to wander off and cause trouble.

The wanderings of Thomas are getting to be too monotonous.

The first snow of the winter fell Sunday morning, after four o'clock. By nine o'clock there were six inches of the beautiful covering the solidly frozen earth. Sleighing is good, but the air is a little too biting for comfort. Six degrees below zero this morning at 5 o'clack, 4 below at 7, and still sold.

Drown eyes, his heart boat almost as did the little mare as she came down the quarter stretch, so he hadn't an argument to use against Ned's going.

"Mo! Me write to your sister?" exclaimed Mr. Armstrong, dropping the tin plates with a clatter, and disregarding his grammar in his surprise; for be it known that, of late, Mr. Armstrong's hands had been more accustomed to dalliance with certain circular ivory tablets inscribed with cabalistic characters than the labors of the pen.

"Yes, of course," returned the other, grown used to depend on his willing friend for everything. "Just write and tell her I'm sick and played out. And drop a hint that a little cash wouldn't come ames just now," he added, care

Mr. Armstrong gazed at his friend as he dozed off, and a slight cloud of annoyance drifted across his sunny face, mingled with something like displeasure at his selfishness; for, from cortain confidences of Ned, he knew his sister made her own way in the world, and needed, no doubt, all her scanty earn-ings. However, he opened Ned's trunk, and, taking therefrom his writing materials, entered upon his task with a somewhat dubious and abashed manner. It would be difficult to state how many sheets of paper Mr. Armstrong tore up, with a frown on his usually bluff brow, before he completed the letter to his satisfaction. And when he had done so, it is a reasonable supposi-tion that the latter part of his friend's injunctions were disregarded. Mr. Armstrong saying to himself, "If he needs money, I'll get it somehow," albeit, from his close attention to his sick he felt quite, I may say, a friendly interest in her welfare. And when, during one of these conversations, Ned showed him a photograph of a girlish face, with brown hair and browner to get out of the buckboard, then he stopped and spoke nervously. From this time it was noticeable that Mr. Armstrong's sombrero took a less rakish slant over his long hair, and the erimson necktie was discarded for one of a less gorgoous hue. Mr. Armstrong was also seen no more behind the green baize doors of the "Delmunico of the West," and the Pinta mare was no more on Sunday afternoons speeded in contests down the mesa in front of the camp, to the depletion of his opponents' pockets and the consequent replenishment of his own.

and drove rapidly to the other end of the camp to where a little tent was Success came after parsistent efforts, and then he took Ned in as a partner in the Nellie lode, and threw himself heart stretched under a cottonwood.
Checking the mare, he descended, and soul into developing the claim.

But Ned, unfortunately, was one of those weak, easy, selfish natures who can bear neither the storms of adversity "Well, old man, how are you now?" nor the sunshine of prosperity, and Mr. was his hearty greeting to the occupant. Armstrong saw, to his consternation, his friend falling into the evil ways he himself had forsaken.

In vain he advised and admonished ind tried to interest him in other things The result was invariably the same -a visit to the "Delmonico" and a drunken row. Sometimes, indeed, moved by his friend's earnestness. Ned would promise to do better, but generally he would sullouly tell him to mind his own affairs, or drop a hint to the effect "that those who had lived in glass houses oughtn't to sling stones;" at which Mr. Armstrong's lips would tighten ominously, and he would grasp his pick-handle nervously; but he usually managed to restrain himself by thinking of Ned not as Ned, but as Nellie's brother, and was always pleas-ant and did the greater part of the work while Ned idled around.

As the time passed and the partners waxed prosperous, it was decided between the two to have Nellin come out and keep house for them, an arrangement which Mr. Armstrong was unxious to forward, as he thought his sister's presence would have a salutary effect on Ned. At least he told himself that was the reason he was looking forward so anxiously to her coming; but it is probable that, if Mr. Armstrong had ross examined himself very rigidly, ha-

For that well known cosmopolitan figure the traveling American, belongs, of course, almost invariably to the city class. He is the successful speculator, the importer of dry goods, the runway king, the Wall street gam-bles. The political wire puller, the Chicago pork dealer, the San Francisco murchant, the educated New England gentleman, or the wenthly descendant of Philadelphia Quakers. Now, it is a carious fact that though the American towns have their whole rusem there for the most purt as collectors of pro-duce or distributors of imports to and from the country districts, yet the American towns-man generally known and cares less about the country than any other townsman in the world-than even the flaueur of the varies, or the cooped-up working a of Belleville or Montametre It is a nys a fresh astonishment to the educated American to find that intelligent Englishmen with whom he convolves live almost or quite entirely in the country. He has no conception of any body except a farmed living by prefer ene easily hear on earth except in a town. He sekion goes outside the town, himself, taking his pleasure and exercise their in parks and gardens than in fields or meadows. "The country" suggests to his mind only a picture, not of green hedges and village churches embowered in trees, but of long fonceless cornfleids, endless expanses of bare grass land, and high roads running in straight lines through more or less dreary straight lines through more or less dreary strikarian "real estate". As an American humself has somewhat well phrased it, in the states there is a great deal of the states there is a great deal of land, but very little country. So the Americans whom the Englishman meets at home or abroad are almost all townsmen who have still to discover the vast mass of their own fellow citizens, or who know them only nt a distance as a frugal race, dwelling in 19 mote frame houses, and driving buggles along dabious roads, seen of urban eyes only, at the level crossings on the rankays, where a bell ings periodically to warn the adventuron er of approaching trains When the Englishman goes to the states, it these same town-bred Americans who offer

um a hearty and hospitable welcome; and so he comes back again after his three months' tour for the most part leaving the triest America of all as undiscovered as it was be fore the days of Christopher Columbus. Don r say there is no help for Catarrh Hay Fever and Cold in the head, since
